The Phonograph That amazed Hondo Can be bought!

There is a rumor abroad that the instrument which triumphed in the drastic comparison test, made at the Hondo Auditorium, was a special exhibition model. That rumor is FALSE. The instrument was a regular Official Laboratory Model,—out of our own stock.

Every Official Laboratory Model in our stock is guaranteed to sustain the same test.

If you were one of those, in that Saturday's audience, who wistfully exclaimed: "Wouldn't it be wonderful if I could buy a phonograph like that"—know that you can. Know that it will perform this miracle every day for you in your own home.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph With a Soul"

Come in and hear for yourself the Official Laboratory Model's marvelous realism. Find out about our Budget Plan, which enables you to own an Official Laboratory Model for a small down payment, the balance on a gentleman's agreement to suit your convenience.

NOTE:—The test at Main Auditorium was made by Miss Helen Davis, mezzo soprano, and Sibyl Sanderson Fagan, whistler. They compared their living voice with its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. There was no difference between the living voice and the RE-CREATED voice.

The New Edison stands absolutely alone in this achievement; no other phonograph has ever sustained this test of comparison.

C. R. GAINES, Hondo, Texas

Do You Want a Certificate of Authenticity?

Everyone who selects his Official Laboratory Model now, receives a handsomely engraved document, which certifies over the signatures of Misses Helen Davis and Sibyl Sanderson Fagan that such instrument is the equal, in every respect, of the instrument used in her test. These artists have personally inspected all the Official Laboratory Models in our store.

CHAPTER III.

The Shores of the Infinite.

The summer was a season of great activity and development. Harris did not sow any crop after the first of June, but applied himself then to the construction of his stable, which was built after the same fashion as the house.

As McCrae had predicted, there was a considerable movement of settlers into the district, and at several points their tents or rude houses now broke the vast sweep of the horizon. Tom Morrison had found land to the satisfaction of his heart within three miles of the Harris homestead, and his big log house, 18x24, assumed the proportions of a castle by comparison with the smaller homes springing up around. Some miles to the east Dick Matheson, straight from the lumber camps of the Madawaski, had pitched his tent, and a few miles farther on was his friend the shanties, John Burton. To the west were the Grants, and to the north Hiram Riles and his wife, Eliza. A missionary had in some way spied out the field, and held monthly Sunday services at Morrison's house; and Dr. Blain, when not in one of his unfortunate debauches, had his headquarters at the new town of Plainville, which consisted of Sempter's general store and a "stopping place," and which had sprung up near the junction of two streams in anticipation of the railway.

And so the first summer wore away and the first harvest was at hand. Any disappointment which had been occasioned by backward conditions earlier in the season was effaced by the wonderful crop which now crowned the efforts of the pioneers. On their finest eastern farms they had seen nothing to equal the great stand of wheat and oats which now enveloped them, neck-high, whenever they invaded it. The great problem before the settlers was the harvesting of this crop. It was a mighty task to attempt with their scythes, but there was no self-binder, or even reaper, within many miles.

Finally Morrison solved the problem for the whole community by placing an order, at a fabulous figure, for a self-binder from the United States. It was a cumbersome, wooden frame contrivance, guiltless of the roller bearings, floating aprons, open elevators, and sheaf carriers of a later day, but it served the purpose, and with its aid the harvest of the little settlement was safely placed in sheaf. The farmers then stacked their grain in the fields, taking care to plow double fireguards, with a burnt space between, as a precaution against the terrifying fires which broke over the prairie as soon as the September frosts had dried the grass. A community some 20 miles to the eastward boasted a threshing mill, and arrangements were made for its use after it had discharged the duties of its own locality.

When Harris' thrashing was done he found he had 600 bushels of wheat and 700 bushels of oats in cone-shaped piles on his fields. The roads were fine and hard, and no snow had yet fallen, so he determined to begin at once with the marketing of his wheat. His last cent had been spent months before; indeed, it had been only through the courtesy of the storekeeper at Plainville, who was also postmaster, and who had stretched the law to the point of accepting hen eggs as legal tender in exchange for postage stamps, that Mary Harris had been able to keep up the brave, optimistic series of letters written "home."

So Harris decided that he would at once market some of his wheat. Most of the oats would be needed for his horses and for seed, and what remained would command good prices from new settlers the following spring, but some of the wheat must be turned into money at once. During the latter part of the summer they had lived exclusively on the produce of their farm; on vegetables from the garden, fish and ducks from the stream, prairie chickens, and an occasional rabbit from the fields. The wild geese had deserted them early in the spring, and returned only after harvest. But now they should have a change on their table. Mary had accepted the pioneer fare of the summer without complaint, but of late Harris had discovered a strange longing in her eyes, and more than once she had arrested herself in the words "I wish we had—" Then two penitent little tears would steal softly down her cheeks, and she would bury her head in his arms as he soothed her with loving words and promised that "after thrashing things would be different."

So now he set out for Emerson with the best load his horses could draw. The first few miles he drove in silence, for there was a heavy weight at his heart as he thought of the little wife alone with the responsibilities of the farm. . . . That she would be faithful to every responsibility he knew beyond question. . . . But he was not quite satisfied. A strange moodiness had come over her, and even with him at home she had at times given way to fits of downheartedness which seemed altogether alien to her nature.

Ten days later he retraced his course in the teeth of a blinding blizzard. A dozen times he had been lost in the last 48 hours, but he had developed the prairie dweller's sense of direction, and had always been able again to locate the trail. The Arthurs would have detained him, almost by force, but the thought of a pale, patient face, wrung with an agony of anxiety not for itself, made him adamant in his resolve to go home at whatever cost. The roads were almost impassable; he left his lumber at Arthurs', but carried with him his window, a few boards for a door, and a little bundle of dry goods. Everything else had gone by the way surrendered in exchange for food and shelter for himself and horses.

It was not dreadfully cold, but the sky seemed only a vast turmoil of snow. Darkness came down very early, but at last Harris began to recognize familiar landmarks close by the trail, and just as night was settling in he drew into the partial shelter of the bench on the bank of the coulee. The horses pulled on their reins persistently for the stable, but Harris forced them up to the house. His loud shout was whipped away by the wind and struggled in a moment, so he climbed stiffly from the wagon and pulled with numb hands at the double thickness of carpet that did service for a door. He fancied he heard a sound, but could be sure of nothing; he called her name again and again, but could distinguish no answer. But at last the fastenings which help the carpet gave way, and he half walked, half fell, into the house.

The lantern burned dimly, but it was not at the lantern he looked. In the farthest corner, scarcely visible in the feeble light, stood his wife, and at her shoulder was the gun, trained steadily upon him.

"Mary, Mary, don't you know me?" he cried.

She dropped her weapon to the floor, where it went off, harmlessly burying its charge in the sod wall.

"Thank God, oh, thank God!" she exclaimed.

He threw off his wet overcoat and rushed to her side. But she sat silent on the bed, staring absently at the light flickering uncertainly in the wind from the open door.

He hastily rearranged the carpet, then, returning to her, he took her hands in his and rubbed them briskly. But she still stared vaguely at the light.

Suddenly a thought came to him. He rushed outside, to find that the horses, of their own accord, had taken shelter beside the stable. Here from the wagon he drew a little bundle and hurried back to the house.

She was sitting where he left her, shivering slightly and watching the play of the light as it flickered up and down the wall. He tore the package open and spread its contents before her.

At first she took no notice, but gradually her eyes found the outline of soft cloth and dainty feminine devices. With a great joy he watched the color returning as her set face relaxed in a smile of ineffable tenderness. She raised her face to his and slipped her arms about his neck, and he knew that for the moment he had snatched her out of the valley of the shadow.

Harris made no more attempts to market his wheat that winter. His wife's health now became his first consideration, but, even had there been

FELT LIKE AN IRON BAND AROUND HEAD

Mrs. Osborne Says She Shudders When She Thinks How She Suffered.

"For years," said Mrs. V. B. Osborne, of 118 Lancaster Ave., Lexington, Ky., "I have been in a run-down condition; nervous, weak and dizzy. I was actually so nervous that any sudden noise or excitement would produce a palpitation of my heart that frightened me. I absolutely could not climb stairs, for to attempt such would thoroughly exhaust me.

"I had nervous headaches and when they came on it seemed that an iron band was drawn tight around my head. I now shudder when I think of those headaches. My stomach was weak and I could not digest the lightest liquid food. Any food of a solid nature caused nausea and the sickening sensation remained for hours.

"My misery was almost unbearable. My sleep was never sound and I was worn out all the time. My condition was indeed a very deplorable one. I finally sought treatment in Cincinnati but nothing helped me one particle. I was on the verge of giving up in despair when a neighbor pleaded with me to try Tanlac. I obtained a bottle of the medicine and began its use.

"I began improving at once and soon felt my nervousness and dizziness disappearing. Then my headaches left me and I realized my strength had returned. My appetite and digestion improved and I am now so much better in every way. This Tanlac is a wonderful medicine and the only one that ever really helped me. I hope every poor woman who is suffering as I did will try it."

Tanlac is sold in Hondo by W. H. Windrow; in Castroville by Joseph Courand & Co.; and in Dunlay by Louis A. Haby; and by all leading druggists.

no such problem, experience had shown that nothing was to be gained by making the long and expensive trip to Emerson. The cost of subsistence of man and team on the way devoured all the proceeds of the wheat; indeed, there were instances on record in the settlement where men who attempted such trips during the winter actually came back poorer than they left, while those who could show a gain of a bag of sugar, a sack of flour, or a box of groceries were considered fortunate indeed.

"What shall we eat?" said Harris to his wife, when, after a full discussion, it was decided that no more grain could be marketed until spring.

"Oh, we shall not suffer," was her calm reply. "We have over 500 bushels of wheat."

"But we can't eat wheat!"

"I'm not so sure of that. I heard Mr. McCrae say that lots of families had wintered on wheat. Indeed, boiled wheat is something of a delicacy. Even the best city families rarely have it, although it is more nutritious than flour and much easier to prepare."

HAVE TOO MUCH SENTIMENT

Authors Who Write of the Miseries of the Poor Prone to Draw on Their Imagination.

When I looked at Mr. Galsworthy's tightened lips, I felt certain that they were drawn closely together, not to prevent himself from forgetting his indifference to himself but to prevent him from pouring out his anger at wrong and cruelty suffered by other people, writes St. John Ervine in the North American Review. His hatred of injustice possesses him like a fury, so that I expect to find his hands always clenched. There are times, indeed, when he allows his feelings for others, human and animal, to destroy his sense of proportion, and he will sometimes imagine that people or beasts are suffering a great deal more of pain than they really are, even that they are suffering, when in fact they are not suffering at all. This is the complaint most commonly made of him by his critics, that he sometimes exaggerates the extent to which people and, particularly, animals suffer.

When I was a child I remember that I often read in sentimental Sunday-school books of slum children who never smiled and had never seen grass. I suppose that fundamentally I have a skeptical mind, for even then I found myself doubting whether there were any children in the world who have never seen grass. Grass is so persistent! . . . I knew that a street had only to be free of traffic for a short while and little blades of grass would begin to push up from between the cobbles! . . . It might be that slum children never smiled—though I was dubious of that—but all of them must have seen some grass some time. Then I grew up and left Ulster and went to London, and for two or three years I lived in the confines of a slum in South London, where I discovered my sentimental authors were sentimental liars, that poor people do live lives of incessant misery, that they smile and laugh as often as, if not more frequently than, rich people, and are fully as happy as anyone else.

Happiness and unhappiness are conditions of the spirit, and provided a man has sufficient food to eat and a decent shelter and warm clothes, it matters very little whether he be rich or poor. Mr. Galsworthy is not always as sensible of this as he might be. Like many idealists he attaches more importance to the material things than many materialists do. He lets himself be too easily persuaded that a thing is wrong because it looks wrong.

Wanted the Dearest.

Clad in fine raiment, the Englishman who had inherited a fortune entered the chemist's shop.

"I want one of them plasters to stick on yer back," he explained.

"Yes, sir," replied the chemist, politely hiding a smile. "You mean a porous plaster."

The customer drew himself erect, till the glittering new watch chain—hall marked on every link—which crossed his middle, threatened to snap.

"What do you mean," he snorted. "Poor 'ouse plaster, indeed! I want the very best you've got."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

HONDO TESTIMONY.

Home Proof, Here, There and Everywhere.

When you see Doan's Kidney Pills recommended in this paper you most always find the recommender a Hondo resident. It's the same everywhere—in 3,800 towns in the U. S. Fifty thousand people publicly thank Doan's. What other kidney remedy can give this proof of merit, honesty and truth? Home testimony must be true or it could not be published here. Read this Hondo recommendation. Then insist on having Doan's. You will know what you are getting:

B. H. Robinson, carpenter, says: "Several years ago I was troubled with my kidneys. I had to get up about three or four times at night to pass the kidney secretions which were scalding and highly colored. I had dizzy spells and black specks would appear before my eyes. My back ached and I had sharp pains in the region of my kidneys. A friend told me of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got a box. That one box of Doan's regulated my kidneys and my back never aches now."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Robinson had. Foster-McBura Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surface of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be removed and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The Man Who Fails.

The man who fails is the sort of chap who is always looking around for a snap; who neglects his work to regard the clock; who never misses a chance to knock. He is grouchy and slow when work begins. When it's time to quit, he jokes and grins; He's always as busy as busy as can be. When he thinks the boss is around to see.

He believes that a "pull" is the only way by which he can ever draw bigger pay; And he sulks and growls when he sees his plan upset by the "push" of another man.

He's on the job when he draws his pay; That done, he soldiers his time away. While the men who tackle their jobs with vim keep pushing and climbing ahead of him.

For the man who fails has himself to blame. If he wastes his chances and misses his aims; He'd win if he'd use his hands and wits; The man who fails is the man who quits.

—Charles R. Barrett.

STUDY to win; deserve the winning!

"MAKE fast the pack upon your shoulders rightly; For heavy burdens may be carried lightly."

MUCH of the ease or difficulty of any task we must perform depends upon the spirit and the manner with which we undertake it!

THE man who succeeds above his fellows is the man who early in life clearly discerns his object and towards that habitually directs his powers. Even genius itself is but fine observation strengthened by fixed purpose. —Lord Lytton.

It may be proved with much certainty, that God intends no man to live in this world without working, but it seems no less evident that He intends every man to be happy in his work. It was written: "In the sweat of thy brow," but it was never written: "In the breaking of thy heart." —Ruskin.

THE New York Commercial sounds this optimistic note: "The one thing necessary now is the restoration of confidence. As a matter of fact there is no reason why it ever should have been impaired. Business has slowed down, it is true, and we have got to take immediate measures to restore its activity, but that does not mean that we have lost faith in our country or the resourcefulness of our people. The American people never lie down on the job. It may take us a little time to wake up to the situation, but when we do, we usually take hold of it and straighten it out. This is not boastfulness, but simply a statement of fact—of faith in ourselves."

FARMERS as a class, says the Dallas Semi-Weekly Farm News, can do much for themselves by giving their fullest support to the worthy movement toward co-operative marketing already started, but the individual farmer has but one method of playing safe. That is to so plan his crops and manage his animals that he can "live at home" as nearly as possible. Just to the extent that he removes himself from dependence on markets and on credit extended by banks and merchants will he insure himself against loss and increase his chances of profit under conditions as they now exist. Farmers are the only business people who are able to conduct a self-sustaining business, so nearly removed from dependence on others, and it is plainly the part of wisdom for them to adopt this plan.

IN the course of a very lucid article on Reduced Agricultural Production in a recent issue of Breeder's Gazette, C. L. H. says: "Under our present system price is the result of the interaction of effective demand upon available and prospective supply, and for most agricultural products the supply element is the more important factor, for the demand for these products is apt to be rather inelastic; that is, changes in price do not greatly change the consumptive demand for these products. . . . In this price-making equation the supply side is the only one that farmers can influence, and an oversupply can only be remedied by a decreased production. There is no obligation of any kind upon farmers to go on producing without regard to the amount and price of their products." In other words, when the price of any commodity drops below the cost of production the logical and sensible thing to do is to quit producing.

Eat More Rice

With a view to reducing the high cost of living to the consumer and encouraging the domestic rice industry, the Bureau of Markets of the State Department of Agriculture and the Home Economics Department of the University of Texas, collaborating, urge the use of more rice in Texas.

In England the average person eats 27 pounds of rice a year. In France the per capita consumption is 34 pounds, and in Spain and Italy it is 104 and 105, respectively. In the United States the per capita consumption is 3 pounds. This amount can easily be increased when rice is plentiful and selling at a low price.

Some of the world's best rice is grown in this country. Texas is a large producer, and Texas' rice industry should be encouraged. It is one of our best crops, and the industry is only in its infancy. There are many acres of prairie lands that can be converted into fertile rice fields.

Do you know that rice is one of the most easily digested of all foods? And that it is one of the cheapest of foods because it contains scarcely any waste matter and very little water?

We do not consume enough of this great product of our State. More rice could be added to our diet with the good result of cheapening it in most cases. Rice is especially useful in the planning of dinners where a starchy vegetable is desired in addition to another vegetable. The choice of starchy vegetables is small, and rice should be welcomed by the housewife.

USE RICE EVERY DAY.

MONDAY—Rice with milk as a cereal for breakfast.

TUESDAY—Rice bread or muffins.

WEDNESDAY—Rice with cheese or tomatoes as a main dish for lunch or supper.

THURSDAY—Rice pudding for dessert with raisins, chocolate, or some other flavoring.

FRIDAY—Rice for dinner with meat, fish, or eggs, and one vegetable.

SATURDAY—Rice in meat pie, meat and vegetable stew, or meat loaf.

SUNDAY—Rice griddle cake for breakfast.

Use rice also in thickening soups, in sauces, in milk and custard puddings, in vegetable salads, in combination dishes.

Cook rice in large amount of liquid. It increases to four times its original bulk when enough liquid is added. Skim milk and vegetable stock are excellent for use in cooking rice.

Consult any standard cook-book for a number of excellent recipes.

E. W. COLE,

Director Bureau of Markets, Texas Department of Agriculture, MARY E. GEEKING, Chairman, Home Economics Dept. University of Texas.

COOK RICE BY THIS MASTERFUL RECIPE

Follow this famous old recipe of the South. It is so simple that, any one using it can successfully boil rice the first time.

Wash rice thoroughly in a strainer. Use a deep porcelain or agate-ware kettle. To six cups of boiling water add one level teaspoonful of salt. Then add one cup of washed rice so slowly that water continues to boil. Lift rice occasionally with fork, and shake kettle so that no kernels stick to bottom. But—this is important—NEVER STIR

THE RICE. Boil twenty minutes. Then pour water off, if any, and place in open oven where it will finish swelling without burning. Each grain will stand alone, plump, tender and delicious.

Automobile Truck Bill Will Become Operative January 1st.

The automobile truck bill, known as Senate Bill No. 101, will not go into effect until January 1, 1922, according to advice received from the attorney general's office at Austin by G. M. Knebel of the Manufacturers' Association of San Antonio. The attorney general rules that the bill, passed at the last session of the legislature and generally supposed to go into effect last Saturday, will not go into effect until next year.

This bill fixes a regular annual license on trucks and provides a mileage tax for every mile the truck travels outside the city limits. This tax being from one to eight cents the mile, according to the size of the truck. The bill provides that a record must be kept of the mileage traveled in every county and reports made each month. "This bill works a hardship," Mr. Knebel said, "on all truck owners and operators who have business outside the city limits. It is also a great annoyance to the large industrial concerns which have been established a short distance outside the city limits. If this law is put into effect, it will have the tendency to drive the truck out of business. It is hoped that at the coming special session of the legislature that the undesirable features will be eliminated." —San Antonio Light.

Cancer on Scar of a Burn.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Society of Medicine in London, Dr. W. G. Spencer showed a case of skin cancer on the site of the scar of an X-ray burn. The woman had had a hairy mole on her left temple destroyed by monthly exposures to X-rays for two years. The scar had remained sound for eight years, but three months ago an epithelioma had appeared and had infiltrated the eyelids. Doctor Spencer condemned a treatment which left a burnlike scar in a case which could just as easily have been treated by the knife.

QUEER MORALS AND MANNERS

Bedouins of the Desert Have Their Own Code and Live Up to It Strictly.

With the Bedouins the chief means of livelihood is stealing camels and cattle from other tribes. A man who has great numbers of camels and large herds obtained in this way boasts of his prowess and stands well with his people. Some of the tribes obtain their wives in a similar manner. If a sheikh desires to add a certain dusky maiden to his household he makes an offer of money, cattle, camels and cloth to the prospective father-in-law, and if this offer is refused or delayed beyond a reasonable time he obtains possession of her by force. He gathers a company of tribesmen, well armed and mounted, and also ten or a dozen women, also mounted, and sets off for the camp where the maiden is. Arriving at the camp he sends the women into the harem to possess the girl. No strange man ever enters a harem, nor will men of the camp attack the visiting women. They overpower the womenfolk and servants in the tent and take the girl to the waiting sheikh at the village edge. The girl is there placed on a decorated camel and taken to her future home, where a wedding feast is made ready. There is no marriage ceremony.

Manners count for more in the mountains of Moab than in many other countries. Not only is rudeness not tolerated, but it is dangerous. And, while knives and forks have never been known, it is not correct to eat with the left hand, only with the right. Bedouin wives are supposed to be good cooks. They live chiefly on meat stuffed with vegetables or vegetables mixed with a little meat. A Bedouin family breakfasting Easter morning is likely to have a menu consisting of dates and buttermilk. Their pastry is dipped in the honey of wild bees. The devil is supposed to have caught a guest when he choked at a meal, and if polite he would cut his cheek from jaw to jaw to show that food caught in his teeth rather than that he choked intentionally.

If a lady were to wear her Easter hat into this part of the Holy Land she might be murdered. For in the desert region of Moab there is no excuse for a hat, Easter or no Easter. Turbans may be worn by the tribes, but there are Bedouins who believe that a foreigner has something to conceal if he covers his head with a hat.

Swiss Lakes Disgorge Relics.

The recent drought in Switzerland has lowered the lakes so much that archaeologists are having a great opportunity to examine the old lacustrine or pile dwellings which date back to the stone age. Old pottery is being discovered in two lake dwellings revealed on the shores of Lake Neuchâtel, says a cablegram to the New York Times, and hundreds of piles in perfect preservation and on which these dwellings originally rested are now clearly visible. Many persons have volunteered help for excavating the remains of these ancient dwellings, which, according to Doctor Kellerchief, the Swiss authority on the subject, ceased to be inhabited about the first century of the Christian era. Numerous boats, which apparently were wrecked and sunk in past times, are now visible.

Some men would be happy if they possessed the ability to do others as others do them.

Be on the level. Don't look down on a fellow just because he happens to be in a hole.

NEW YORKERS TOO CHILLY

Wyoming Man Astonished to Find He Couldn't Make Friends With Men He Met in Hotel.

"They're a queer lot," said the man from Wyoming. "I've been living here in the same house with them for a month, and darned if I know any of them yet. Guess I never will," and he went on to explain how it was. "I run a mine out in Wyoming for some New York people. Been coming here once or twice a year for a long time, but as I only stayed a few days, always put up at a hotel.

"This time I had to stay a couple of months, so someone told me about a bachelor home, and as it sounded pretty good I took it on. Have to give a lot of references and all that kind of thing--you'd a thought that I was trying to borrow a million dollars.

"After a while I got a room there and started out to make friends. About one hundred men live at this place--little rooms like cells in a monastery, all right to sleep in and dress in if you haven't got many clothes. Nice house, though, with a lounge, gymnasium, sun parlor and a restaurant. The restaurant was the place where I thought that I could make some friends. But nary a friend.

"When they come in they look for a vacant table. Seem to like to eat alone. There are about thirty tables in this place, and pretty soon there are thirty men, each by himself at a table. Nearly everyone has a paper which he reads or pretends to read. If one comes in late and all the tables have somebody sitting at them, then he has got to sit down with another guy, and he acts like he is sorry he has to do it. He sits down, looks at the ceiling, or at the wall just beyond the other man's shoulder, looks everywhere but at the other man. If his feet happen to touch the other's under the table he begs pardon. They are mighty polite. Once I thought one was going to beg my pardon because he accidentally looked at me.

"We don't do that way out in Wyoming. If I go into a large restaurant and there is only one man at a table I go over and sit down with him so we can talk and get acquainted. We are sociable folks out there and everybody wants to know everybody else. Way we figure it, life is pretty short and a man needs all the friends he can get."--New York Sun.

Makes Divers' Work Easier.

Possibilities for work in the depth of the sea are held out by a new lamp now on exhibition at a marine show in Philadelphia. Experts say the invention opens a new field of deep sea work in many ways. The lamp, which is the invention of a student at the Sheffield scientific school, Yale university, enables divers to make repairs on vessels disabled at sea that are now impossible except by recourse to dry-docking.

It is also expected to be of invaluable assistance during war times, enabling divers to clear the sea of dangerous mines. The United States, Japanese and British navies have all ordered a supply of the lamps. The lamp is also expected to be of value in deep sea fishing and in sponge fishing.

Not So Encouraging.

"Your father merely grunted when I told him I wanted to marry you."
"Don't be discouraged, Alexander. Father is an elemental creature and expresses pleasure as well as anger by grunts."

"Yes, dear, but this was a fortissimo grunt. In fact, there was so much power behind it I'm afraid it was a snort."--Birmingham Age-Herald.

Perils on Land.

"It takes courage to be an aviator."
"One kind of courage," replied Mr. Chuggins. "And yet it would be a comfort if I could sail my flivver into the clouds where there wouldn't be any risk of meeting a reckless bootleg bandit or an irritated traffic cop."

Artistic Improvement.

"Do you think it's wrong for a woman to paint her face?"
"Not always," replied Miss Cayenne. "Sometimes it's a kindness."
